Several keyboard macros let you accelerate or retard the timing interval and restart the timing session. When you press the hotkey, SnapTimePro automatically starts timing the event and records the timing value into the timing session. If you press the hotkey when you have already started timing the event, the timing session is stopped and you get the current timing value. When you press the hotkey without having started timing the event, SnapTimePro only starts timing the event, but does not record the timing value. SnapTimePro starts timing the event automatically as soon as you press the hotkey. When you press the hotkey to stop timing the event, SnapTimePro automatically stops timing the event, resets the timing session and displays the timing value into the timing session. The following keyboard macros are available: KeyMacro Hotkey key code Description

See this blog for more details Effect of growth hormone, growth hormone releasing factor and somatostatin on plasma insulin and glucagon concentrations in man. The effects of the hormones of GH-IGF-I-system on the concentrations of plasma insulin and glucagon were investigated in man. A bolus injection of GH (20 mg) and GHRH (100 micrograms) failed to alter plasma insulin and glucagon concentrations. However, continuous infusion of GHRH (3.7 micrograms/kg/h) increased plasma insulin and decreased plasma glucagon concentrations in three of four subjects. Somatostatin (500 micrograms i.v.) completely abolished the rise in plasma insulin concentrations but had no effect on the decrease in plasma glucagon concentrations. i
