You can start from a Photoshop file and continue with a new edit. ## Editing and Manipulating Images With Photoshop, you can start from the layer system to make changes to images in different ways. You'll start by creating a new layer over your document, and then working on that layer. Once you've finished work on that layer, you can delete the layer to create a blank canvas for the next part of the image. After you delete a layer, Photoshop automatically creates another layer for any changes you make. A web server serves content, such as web pages, to clients, like web browsers, using the Hypertext Transfer Protocol (HTTP). It often accepts requests for data that it then sends back in the form of web pages. A typical screen display is created by layers of pixels to display a complete image, often interspersed with black or transparent areas. Generally, the viewing screen is divided into an upper white area and lower black area called the "luminance mask".
