NetBus 1.7.1. (Also known as SoftBoot) is a hidden trojan spyware program that hides itself in the stub file Netbus, and can be downloaded by email viruses, key loggers and dialers. In order to use Netbus 1.7.1 you need to patch the stub file in question with the post-exploitation patch prepared by cyber security experts at Download Help. This trojan is not necessary the only reason why it comes bundled with these three rootkit tools. You have to be vigilant when using this trojan on your computer network. This is a very dangerous trojan that will harvest passwords and keylogger for all the computers on your computer network. How Netbus 1.7.1 works. The file "Netbus.dll" will be the main component that houses the trojan. The NetBus trojan works by sending its payload to other programs or windows on your computer that are running at the time. This is achieved by adding the stub file, "Netbus" to the start up directory of Windows. This stub file is then activated by many and different programs, so the trojan can be sent to many different computer machines. NetBus 1.7.1 The main reason for the trojan to be included with the rootkit tools is to log keystrokes and track passwords, and harvest them from your computer.
