turn-based tactical computer game. It is the first of a number of interactive fiction games designed by Annuska Ward, released in 1984 and marketed as the StarSector Interactive Fiction System (SSIFS). The game was written by Ward and David Wingrove and published by Superior Software in 1984 for the Sinclair Spectrum, ZX Spectrum and Commodore 64. Supervision was given by

Martin Belich. Starsector was the most successful game of its kind on the market at the time and received critical acclaim upon release. The game was well received by reviewers, who highlighted the gameplay and structure as well as the high level of interactivity and text adventure system. Starsector was highly influential in the creation of other text adventure games. In particular, the use of the role-playing game structure, the setup and scoring system, and the menu system. Further, the game helped to popularise the genre as a whole, leading to the development of games such as The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy and Doom, and creating a major player in the text adventure game market. Plot Starsector is set in the 23rd century in the Themis system. Themis is a rich trade area, with a number of different species interacting with each other. An ongoing war is taking place between the Ksek, who are technologically advanced and have conquered almost the entire system, and the Rimligan, who fight against the Ksek for freedom. The Rimligan are a "barely-intelligent" race of insects and their attacks are mostly mechanical. The game is
