arkadia emerged from a porch at the back. She had hidden the sword inside a basket of straw! Lady Jilt hung the sword back over her shoulders. She handed the basket to Dimitri and said, 'I'll take this for you. Please thank my husband for me. In the meantime, if I could have some water, I'm parched.' Lady Jilt followed Arkadia back to the house. 'We're leaving for home now,' said Teutberg. He turned towards Mirdin. 'Goodbye, Teutberg!' 'It was lucky that you found the sword, Dimitri,' said Mirdin. 'I'm glad that we're safe now.' 'The bandits are after us,' said Dimitri, 'and they're getting closer.' 'Well,' said Mirdin, 'we're in an orchard so it's safe here. But the bandits will be after us - ' - and they'll be after you now, too, Mirdin. We've got to go.' Mirdin said, 'I don't like it. I don't like it at all. You're right, Dimitri. I'm a coward. I'm not afraid of anything but I haven't really come to a place like this before, ever. I've never truly been scared of anything, no matter what it was. But I'm a coward. I don't know how I'm going to get away from those bandits. Before I left home, I promised the duke that I'd stay here until I saw Dandini before I left the country.' 'Then follow the river,' said Dimitri. 'But if you aren't with me, I don't know how I can do that,' said Mirdin. 'Go with Arkadia,' said Dimitri. 'But she'll never leave her people and you - ' - we're not going back to our own country,' said Dimitri, '- I've lost that. I've lost everything except for you, Mirdin.' 'You don't understand,' said Mirdin, 'I've watched my mother's people die a hundred times. If their folk are going to die, I'd rather die with them than after them. I'm not going back home any more.' 'Then we'll go somewhere else,' said Dimitri. '
