VenusBlood Frontier, developed by Idea Factory International, is a new breed of fantasy role-playing game where not only do you get to assume the role of the Goddesses of Law and Chaos fighting over the Floating Continent of Yggdrasil, but you get to join them as a guest of honour along with their erstwhile mortal foes: the invading armies of the Dark Lord Surt. Story: The continent you are now on, known as the Floating Continent of Yggdrasil, was the site of a great war between the inhabitants of the continent and the gods, which was over the possession of the legendary "Heart of Yggdrasil". The conflict tore the Kingdom of Ga-Un apart, leaving its people scattered and its lands burning. Some managed to escape. But the gods also did not entirely relinquish their hold on the floating continent. Through the blessing of the divine spirits, some humans were sheltered in place with a veil protecting them from the radiance of the sun. Many years later, a race of demons known as "Doomsmen" have reorganized and proceeded to invade the Continent. They have managed to achieve a stronger state than before. Using the power of their goddesses' "Hunger", their twisted souls began to corrupt them, erasing their good deeds and creating a new race of monsters. Demons known as "Theles" and the Doomsmen, they terrorized the floating continent. Feeling powerless to stop them, the goddesses of law and chaos have come to regret their initial decision. As a result, they have formed an alliance with the humans who survived, and have set out to reclaim the continent. Their battle will usher in a new era where the human race can live in harmony with the goddesses and await the rebirth of Ragnarok. Have you chosen to be a goddess of law or chaos? So far, the country's government has not commented on the statements made on Tuesday by two Ukrainian-born deputies in Moscow who effectively turned the popular uprising in Ukraine into a conflict that threatens the course of the global and Ukrainian discussions. Interfax quoted Putin as telling journalists in a meeting that such comments on the state television channel Rossiya-24 were "unacceptable, damaging and extremist." Putin emphasized that Moscow "recognized and respected Ukraine's territorial integrity" but said the three men - the deputy speaker of the parliament, Oleg Lekhashvili, and Lviv State Duma deputies Andriy Shevchenko and Eduard Boltyunov - tried to form an independent domestic system of government within Ukraine. "The actions of these people are not only unacceptable but also extremely dangerous and extremist," Putin said in statement. He said they had "destroyed the task of dialogue with Ukraine", a process that should have begun with the treaty on normalizing diplomatic relations and then proceeded toward integration of the foreign relations of the three countries. Petr Poroshenko, the new Ukrainian President-elect who was named on the day of those deputies' statements, is confident that their remarks will not undermine the agreement on the presidency, which he signed with Russia's Dmitry Medvedev and EU and US diplomats in Geneva on Monday. "It is clear that what they (the deputies) said is not serious, and I am sure that the opposition has understood that," Poroshenko said in Kiev on Wednesday. "They did not bring any tangible consequences to Ukraine, not to Russia, nor to the United States. Their actions are meaningless." Poroshenko said he would continue negotiations on the country's foreign relations with all major international partners. "We want the generation of results, (we want to) promote it. For this we have worked and we will work. If (the deputies)

I have built a model and tested its accuracy and the test is randomly choosing the relationship between predictor and dependent variables. The model chooses on which class it predicts the most. My problem is that I would like to predict binary dependent variables that fall within those classes
