Dedicated to toytoa To 1995 Free Free Download Anaemia and low-density lipoprotein receptor-related protein 5 activity modulate the severity of spondyloarthritis. The aetiology of axial spondyloarthritis (SpA) is still unknown. In contrast to many other rheumatic diseases, elevated levels of soluble tumor necrosis factor-alpha receptor 1 (TNFR1) are common in SpA, which might reflect activation of TNFR1 expression in cells of the immune system. Therefore, we determined the relationship between soluble TNFR1 and other parameters of inflammation (C-reactive protein) and erythrocyte levels of the low-density lipoprotein receptor-related protein 5 (LRP5), a co-receptor for TNFR1. A total of 1379 patients with an SpA diagnosis, drawn from a previously used database, was considered in this cross-sectional study. Serum C-reactive protein and erythrocyte LRP5 levels were determined. Subclinical anaemia was defined as a haemoglobin level <10 mg/l and erythrocyte levels of LRP5 >57 micromol/l. Anaemia and untreated low-grade inflammation were found in 10% and 58% of the SpA patients, respectively. In patients with an SpA diagnosis, the prevalence of anaemia and low-grade inflammation was higher in patients with human leukocyte antigen (HLA)-B27 (anaemia 59%, low-grade inflammation 63%; $P=0.001$ and P
