As opposed to using static 2D images of the players, HyperMotion Technology provides a vivid gameplay experience by accurately recreating the movements of the players. It also provides a more realistic-feeling when making tight situations and off-ball runs, which will make the game more enjoyable. HyperMotion Technology is available in the Season Ticket Edition of FIFA 22 (available from September 28, 2017) as well as being available separately to all FIFA Ultimate Team FIFA players (available from September 28, 2017). The Season Ticket Edition contains a soundtrack composed by Stefan Gräf and a booklet featuring 11 original pieces of art by Andy Collins. These will be available to Season Ticket holders for the remainder of 2017. Other gameplay improvements introduced in the FIFA 22 Season Ticket Edition include the goalkeeper tucking system, allowing players to short and long pass to outnumber the goalkeeper and open up the space for a shot (available in EA SPORTS FIFA 18); an opponent counterattacking opportunity taken more quickly, with greater on-ball unpredictability in high-speed, high-pressure action (available in FIFA 18); improved balancing between professional and amateur AI (available in FIFA 18); further refinements to the Dribbling and Technical Control systems (available in FIFA 18); improved and more natural dribbling animations (available in FIFA 18); deeper Tactical Defending options for defenders (available in FIFA 18); further improvements to attacking transitions (available in FIFA 18); improved ball physics (available in FIFA 18); and improved ball backspin (available in FIFA 18). Each of the improvements listed above was inspired by thousands of fan reaction trials and experiments made during the development of FIFA 18. The game also features improvements to the overall user experience, including an all-new, fluid user interface, improved gameplay mechanics, and more, to make FIFA 22 a truly complete and balanced football experience. Before we get to the technical details, here's the official blurb on the Season Ticket Edition from Electronic Arts: "Welcome to the Season Ticket. With the Season Ticket, you and your league can dominate football. Gameplay is at the heart of FIFA, and a complete overhaul with FIFA 22 gives you the opportunity to feel even more connected to the game. The new technology in the Season Ticket Edition will give you the unique opportunity to add player likeness to your gameplay, provide an improved user interface, and deepen the football experience. The Season Ticket is the key to the future of the Ultimate

FIFA is more than just a game. It's football as you've never seen it. A ball that flies, a flow of movement and incredible collisions. The thing about football is that it's played on the field and that's why it's so special. FIFA makes you feel like you're there. Everything is lifelike from the way the ball behaves in midair to the control of players using every inch of the pitch. Introducing PES 2015 The name says it all. We've gone back to the roots of PES and one of the biggest features is genuine control. PES' greatest asset has always been its ball control and PES 2015 takes that to a whole new level. More Than The Game As an official licence of UEFA, EA SPORTS FIFA 20 features officiated games. Referees will be more officious than ever with more controls, harsher cards and extra fouls. The new sprint and slide mechanic has been added to preserve the authenticity of the sport. Warm Up Warm Up mode helps to make the game more like real football. With a variety of challenges in each mode to test your skills and style, Warm Up is all about finding that feel on the pitch. Champions League PES 2015 has the official licence of UEFA Champions League and have created a new gameplay system to bring the experience closer to real football. Ball Physics The newly added ball physics add more realistic ball movements. The default setting adds a different kind of feel to the game, especially in goal, but can be edited to your preference. Crowd Crowd and Player Interaction Hundreds of new animations have been added to show the fans and create more realistic crowd movement. New crowd choreographies have also been added including sweat, sneezes and more. New crowd interactions have also been included to make spectators feel more involved. More Broadcast Specifics FIFA 20 will feature more specific commentary for live games with announcers being able to select between various broadcasters. An in game social feed allows users to send in their highlights and comments, and vice versa, as they record. PlayStation App The PlayStation App has been improved to be able to notify you of your friends' new content and upload your own photos and videos straight from the PS4 Camera. New Feature: Goal Kick Simulator The Goal Kick Simulator allows users to practice their free kicks bc9d6d6daa
