Currently, it's in the "going to be" state. The most of the time it's going to be in beta it gets you. Users are able to download it and use it for free. However, there are still quite a few bugs that need to be fixed. The Google Playstore only displays a few bu.

This will be the final update for the Chrome Beta, as we're moving to a Stable channel. It brings a lot of fixes and improvements, as well as a UI refresh in the Settings, and a new look to the omnibox. You can read the Changelog to know all the details. Assuming you have the Stable Channel, the best thing you can do is to wait for the Stable version to hit the Playstore. Then, report any bugs you find and help us improve the app. We'll keep this thread up-to-date with any changes, but feel free to check out the new Stable page as well. There's a trick to getting the PWA to work in Chrome. The feature was introduced in version 45, and there are some steps you need to take in order to get it to work. It's all well documented, so it shouldn't be hard. (Updated Apr 26) Added the ability to customize the Autofill fields. Now you can simply click "Add another..." and select the fields you want to add. Clicking on "Available" will display which Autofill options are available. As far as the editing goes, you can leave the fields blank and click the button to autofill. You can also enter values and choose which of those you want to keep. The new scheme is a lot better, but you can also edit the color, font, or anything you like. It's all at your own discretion. The quality is still pretty terrible, though. Bug report and feedback is encouraged to help make this tool better. The only way you can't do this is if you have Ad-Block or any other ad-blocker installed. If that's the case, you can contact me directly or send an email to support@idealgates.com. If there's enough feedback, and I feel I have enough time to implement, we'll update the older version to work as advertised. This app works beautifully, allowing you to create pages that look good, function perfectly, and are extremely easy to manage, update and use. We really
