A: Unzip the archive and double click on the.exe (Dffsetup.exe) file to launch the installation program. Don't try to unpack the archive to another drive or the wrong program such as 7zip will do it. Clinical application of avian and mammalian uricases. The immunologic cross-reactivity of bird and mammalian uricases was examined using an enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay. Highly purified and homogeneous uricase from chicken liver (pURIC-3) and from human liver (bURIC) were employed as coating antigens. Sera from pigeon fanciers and chickens given intravenously or orally an inhibitor of uricase (phenylbutazone, GB, PBT) were used as the primary antibody. The activity of PBT binding to the bird uricase was completely inhibited in the enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay, whereas GB and PBT had little effect on the antigenicity of the bURIC. The binding activity of the immunoglobulin fraction from the sera of pigeon fanciers to PBT-coated plates was also inhibited by GB or PBT, but not by uric acid, which is not usually known to inhibit the uricase. Therefore, the antigenicity of bird uricase is different from that of mammalian uricase.OK, I have three questions about this subject. (1) The doc says that corn oil isn't good for the anal region. I was wondering how it compares with coconut oil for that part of the body. (2) When it comes to lubrication, does the doc say that the oil should be applied topically to the skin? (3) Can oil serve as an emollient for the skin? Does that mean it helps protect the epidermal layer? thanks! Karen Moderator: 4/23/2006 1:12:05 PM [Quote] (1) The doc says that corn oil isn't good for the anal region. I was wondering how it compares with coconut oil for that part of the body. Coconut oil is what I use most for the anal area. It's good for the anal zone, although I haven't done too much testing on it. :eek: (2) When it comes to lubrication, does the doc say that the

I want to use the object as if i just declare it first in the main.cpp. So far i got this: Object.h: class Object { public: int x; Object() {} Object(int x) {} }; main.cpp: #include #include "Object.h" using namespace std; int main() { Object object; return 0; } I got the error at the constructor of Object(): Error C2280: 'int Object::x' : attempting to reference a deleted function I already deleted the copy constructor and the assignment operator. A: Just make Object a friend of itself. class Object { public: int x; Object() {} Object(int x) {} friend Object; }; This makes Object a friend of itself. This in turn means that Object's constructors can call Object's constructors. Similarly, Object's destructors can call Object's destructors. Q: How to format the number to currency format in oracle? I am using oracle 10g. The output I am getting for this query is like this:
DECODE (tot_value, 0, "0", e79caf774b
