An important inclusion to this leaflet is the information that the LST test is to a very small extent used for stress-related illnesses. These are few and far between because the test does not trigger such illnesses. Stress-related illnesses are often caused by situations different from the test being undertaken and are usually recognised by the person who is experiencing them. If you have any doubts about your health and well-being, it would be sensible to consult with your doctor. Sorry for using your space, like to read your mind :) > address@hidden A link to the you a couple of email, if you do not mind. And please, write your email in the line "I want to enter" so I make some correlation > address@hidden I do not mind, but I think you also would have mail me. People seem to be full of contempt when they try to write a text. But I will not be as aggressive as them. My email is in the post. > address@hidden Who said that I was full of contempt? I have written in this way to make you understand that I am not an intimidating individual like that. > address@hidden I thought that I had discovered you. You are dangerous. > address@hidden Why do you think I am dangerous? And what do you mean by dangerous? Are you afraid of my messages? Because I want to talk with you. > address@hidden Again, you do not tell your real name, but you leave hints about yourself. How do I know that you are dangerous? It seems to me that I can discern that in your messages. > address@hidden Because you tell me what your age is? > address@hidden And you want to talk with me? What will we talk about? I do not want to tell you about your age because I do not feel entitled to know that. I do not understand what you mean by talk. > address@hidden A chat with you would be an interesting experience. I do not
