References External links Category:Video games developed in GermanyQ: Preventing the Maximize button from moving application I have a WPF window. I'd like to keep it's size at a reasonable default size, but I'd also like to be able to make it's XAML size smaller. I've set the WindowStyle="None" and the WindowState="Maximized". My problem is when I close the window in the "Maximized" state, the size of the XAML in the code behind file does not change at all. My goal is to have a window whose size and size of the XAML in the code behind file can be independently adjusted. (i.e. the code behind can be shrunk and the window is still the same size but smaller than it would be if the code behind was the size of the screen) Is there any way to accomplish this? A: My goal is to have a window whose size and size of the XAML in the code behind file can be independently adjusted. That is not possible. That would be a very awkward thing to make happen. The actual Window size is determined by the size of the content. And the size of the code behind and XAML are the same thing. The actual size of the window, and the size of the code behind and XAML are the same thing. The code behind is the size of the window. If you need a smaller size, you can always make the window smaller. If you want to resize the window from a smaller size to a bigger size, you have to change the size of the window. Take a journey with two girls - Mariah and Sonya. You play the Game Master, as the girl you control. Your goal is to teach a girl about a certain issue. But remember, she's not the only one in the game. The other girl, Mariah or Sonya, can hear what you do or say. That's why you have to help her in some way. Play it the wrong way and girl will get upset or you can even lose the Game! How to play the game: Interact with the girl - talk to her, ask her questions, give her clothes, take her on a walk, help her to fix something. The girl she'll hear the conversation and her reaction depends on her mood. For example, if she's happy, she'll be happy. Help her to do something - you can help her choose a suitable dress or help her to fix her hair. It's up to you what you do, there's no right or wrong way to finish the game. The girl can't hear every conversation, so only you know about her mood and what to do. The girl will return back to the girl you were talking about only if she has to. Otherwise, you'll be alone in the Game and she's going to find herself very upset! The girl you control can leave the Game at any time, in which case all of the keys will disappear from the Game. The girl you control will go back to reality and the Game Master will leave the Game to the girl she controls. If the girl you control will lose all of the keys, she'll see real people. A girl you control can't see the Game Master, though the Game Master can see her. Sometimes there will be interruptions, but if you have nothing else to do, you can continue from the latest interruption. If the girl loses all of the keys, then you lose too. However, you can pick up the keys where the girl left them and, in this case, you'll continue from the point where you picked them up. Do You Want To Be This Hot Girl?
