Why wouldn't you do a deal for Finley when you already have a great TE? Our goal isn't to play FAB. The goal is to win games. 1) we added another dynamic runner to the offense - Finley can create problems for defenses, he can run straight through or around a defense and he can be an open field threat. This will present problems for defenses because defenses have to play man coverage on the TE, which will be a totally new wrinkle for defenses. 2) Finley will be more available. If he's in, then he can be the biggest threat in the entire offense. If he's out, teams won't be able to concentrate as much on him because he can't cause us problems. We just filled a huge hole and got a big play threat in the best TE in the NFL. 3) we got our best FB, who has a proven track record for generating running lanes, hitting holes and using his body to get extra yardage - I think I'd rather have Staley and Finley than MJD. MJD was a physical talent, but is a head case and a liability as a runner. Staley and Finley are tough and they are smart, which is more important to me than strong or fast. MJD is average in all three departments. 4) Fin
