Indian Mujahideen linked terror strikes on Mumbai, Hyderabad and Delhi on November 2008 and July 2009, putting the spotlight on the National Investigation Agency (NIA)Â . The November 2008 Delhi blast was followed by the January 2009 Hyderabad bomb blast (which killed more than 100 people)Â . The July 2009 Mumbai bomb blast (which killed nearly 200 people)Â . In October 2009, Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) carried out probes in the Hyderabad and Delhi blasts as separate cases on the alleged presence of Indian Mujahideen (IM) terror group. The investigation was later shifted to NIA. The investigation in the Hyderabad and Delhi blasts is considered a success by the central agencies. On 18th January 2010, the National Investigation Agency (NIA) registered an FIR (Indian Penal Code Sections 302 and 120 B) on the Hyderabad blasts case alleging terror connections of the IM. Hyderabad blast accused Abdul Majid (alias Abu Hanifah alias Yunus) was arrested on the charges of plotting the Mumbai and Delhi blasts. After a prolonged trial in the high-profile case, four IM members (who were already serving jail terms) pleaded guilty to the charges of terror-related offences. The trial against other accused were concluded in September 2012. The trial of Abdul Majid was concluded on 13th April 2013. The trail of Indian Mujahideen (IM) accused Aman Tandel, Rakib-ud-din Dagar, Shahid Husain and Harkat-ul-Jihad-al-Islamiya was concluded on 3rd May 2013. The trial in the Mumbai blast case concluded in the evening of 9th May 2013 where the blast accused - Abdul Qayyum Siddiqui, Pehlu Khan and Yasin Bhatkal were convicted and awarded life sentences by the special Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) court. The trial of Indian Mujahideen accused Ibrahim Hiran, Asad Ali, Adil Shah and Mujahid Abdullah in the Hyderabad blast case concluded on 4th July 2013. The trial of Indian Mujahideen accused Shakeel Ahmed and Mohd. Asadullah in the Delhi blast case concluded on 26th July 2013. The NIA on April 22, 2015 appointed the first Chief of National Investigation Agency (NIA), Rakesh Maria. NIA is the new name of NIA and is established on

We have used an oligonucleotide-mediated gene conversion assay (Holliday, V., De Wever, M., and Puck, A. (1992) Proc. Natl. Acad. Sci. U.S.A. 89, 6916-6920) to determine in vivo rates of radiation-induced gene conversion and gene loss in Saccharomyces cerevisiae. The rates of gene conversion are very large: for a chloramphenicol acetyltransferase (CAT) gene converted to a galactose-inducible GAL7-CAT gene, we estimate the rate of conversion of the GAL7/GAL1-CAT allele to be 2.4×10^{-2} per chromosome per Gy. These values are in the same range as the in vitro rates of gene conversion determined for this system and are among the highest rates of gene conversion in any eukaryote. The distribution of recombinant frequencies in gene conversion events is non-random, consistent with a gene conversion mechanism requiring homologous recombination, but not involving strand invasion into nonallelic homologous sequences. Similarly, the frequency of recombinant events in events where the parental genotype is maintained is elevated for gene conversion events involving chromosome V (haploid versus diploid), consistent with the strong linkage disequilibrium observed
