Rumble Runners is a competitive runner racing game through infinite space where you can race over a randomly generated track with each round you play. Along the way you can come across power-ups and special path pieces that can help you reach the end first or sent you flying straight off the track. With the Character Customization and Path Creator, you can customize your experience even more!

Path Creator Each random generated track uses Paths to be build with. With the Path Creator you can build your own Paths that the Game Master can randomly pick to build the Track! You'll have to test your paths before they can be saved, to make sure the end can be reached.

Randomly Generating Race Tracks Each and every match is completely randomly generated. Each power-up will also give you one of the three powerups, making each and every time you play a new round a new experience! Even the Host doesn't have total control over how the Track is being generated, which ensures that every player has a disadvantage. You'll need your wit with you when you race!

Customizing your Golem Your Golem can be customised to look in a unique way! With lots of different Golem Parts to pick from with thousands of colour combinations per part, you can design your character in inconceivable different ways! You can also buy more Golem Parts from the Shop for more creative freedom!

Shop After gathering enough Stardust, which is the currency within the game, you can head to the Shop to buy more Golem Parts to customise your Golem with! Keep an eye out when running, because Stardust gets accidentally generated when the Game Master builds the track!

Different Game Modes

There are two Race Modes; Race Run and Infinite Run. In Race Run, you'll try to reach to the finish platform. Either challenge yourself by setting the bar higher, or race against friends to be their superior! In Infinite Run, you'll be able to run seemingly endless, until you fall off! You can beat your best time, or try to be the last Golem standing.

Multiplayer Rumble Runners

uses a p2p connection to play with other players. One player will be the Party Host, who will then decide how each round is set up. A maximum of 8 players can be part of one Party!

Be the next gun club member to be the deadliest shooter on the range! Gun Club VR brings the world's greatest shooters together in an all-new tribute to the weapon-slinging action of the 50's and 60's. Featuring all the iconic weapons from the movies, Gun Club VR is the ultimate recreation of a bygone era. All-new range environments based on the Allied and Federation game, a new fully-interactive weapon model with complete ballistics and an exhaustive selection of customisation options. Dominate your opponents in six different range environments. You can choose to play as an American, British, Russian, German, Roman or French soldier. Play as a civilian as well as several male and female characters from the movies. Develop your skills by taking on multiple tutorial missions and challenge your friends in PvP combat. Start with a weapon to your liking and then choose from a vast array of upgrades, such as scopes, stocks, extended mags and laser sights. Upgrade to the most modern weapons available in the simulation game. Develop your marksmanship skills by playing through single player and multiplayer game modes. Earn rewards including custom gun club certificates, custom upgrades, limited edition apparel and replica trophies. Every day is a challenge in Gun Club VR. Join the gun club today!

A: According to Wikipedia, the inclusion of actual movies was developed by Guerilla Games and released under the name of "Guerrilla Mode" in 2008.

Q: In google-apps-script or javascript, is there a way to iterate an array of a custom type? I have an array of a custom type: `var array = [{ a: "1", b: 1, c: true }, { a: "2", b: 2, c: true }]`; I want to iterate through this array and do some operations on each object in the array. It seems like the only way to do this is to create a class for the custom type, then instantiate a new class object for each object in the array, then call a function on the class that is called `filter()`. However, I am wondering whether there are any built-in ways to iterate through an array of custom types? I noticed that Function Arrays and JSON can do this, but my custom type is more complicated than simply creating an array of integers. Here c9d1549cdd

Features: This is a special episode of GameRevolution TV as we take a look at Game "Reproduction Man", a seemingly simple puzzle game that quickly turned into something a bit more. We'll be talking about the game's development, how it was created and put together, and the inspiration for the game. But most of all, we'll be seeing how the game itself plays and helps us to explain a little bit about how that simple idea is translated into the game itself. Maybe it's actually too simple in a lot of ways. Maybe it's just a harmless little distraction. You'll be able to decide for yourself after seeing the game. We begin our look at "Reproduction Man" with the very first version of the game. Yes, this video was shot back in September of 2005. It was just a few screenshots and a very basic description on the publisher's page. It showed four images of a thin man (not drawn to scale, mind you) to help you better understand what the game was about. Basically, you had to direct the path of his tiny sperm. (Embedded below) A trailer for the game showed the style of gameplay. It was a 2D puzzle game that sought to replicate the actual process of reproduction. (Embedded below) So you can understand the aim of the game better, we at least had to explain a bit of the anatomy involved.

We are a team of 2 members from Europe, originally from Brazil! Led by [b]Diana[/b] there is now a third member, [b]Caroline[/b]! We hope to continue to create games that allow people to learn and have fun! At the moment the gameplay and the exercise are made for the English version, but we are working hard to add esperanto, portuguese, french and spanish language options! The code is entirely in lua and written using wxpython and pygame, thus it has a very small footprint (under 250kb) For more details about the game please read the [b]Wiki[/b] here. You can also check the [b]Website[/b]! We look forward to seeing everyone playing the game! Download: For PC: For Mac OS X: If you like the game then please consider donating to us!
